COVID-19 Business Re-Opening Guide

As the country continues to face the COVID-19 pandemic and begins planning for the return to the workplace there are several considerations employers and employees need to account for prior to reopening. While details on any expected regulations have been difficult to obtain, it can be expected that individual provinces will begin providing guidance or even regulations for the safe and healthy return to the workplace. This Facility Reopening Guide provides recommendations based on guidance and regulations from health organizations such as the Centers for Disease Control \(CDC\), World Health Organization \(WHO\), Occupational Safety and Health Act \(OSHA\) and health departments on preparing commercial facilities and businesses for the return to standard business operations.

While the CDC does provide guidance for COVID-19 in workplaces, another important source is OSHA which includes regulations for COVID-19 in the workplace under two clauses and standards.

There are three primary aspects to providing the best chance of success in returning back to business in a safe and healthy manner.

1. Disinfectant and Fogging of Office Space and Common Areas
2. Regular Scheduled Maintenance Cleaning of Employee/Employer Touchpoints
3. Educating employees on how to return back to work & maintain a Covid free work environment
